Excerpt: . . . foregoing chapter, how the worms begin and continue to shew signs of maturity. This last day they attain perfection, which may be ascertained by the following indications: 1st. When, on putting some leaves on the wickers, the insects get upon the leaves without eating them, and rear their heads, as if in search of something else. 2nd. When, on looking at them horizontally, the light shines through them, and they appear of a whitish-yellow transparent colour. 3rd. When numbers of the worms, which were fastened to the inside of the edges of the wickers, and straightened, now get upon the edge, and move slowly along, instinct urging them to seek change of place. 4th. When numbers of worms leave the centre of the wickers, and try to reach the edges, and crawl up upon them. 5th. When their rings draw in, and their greenish...
