Not illustrated. 1816 Excerpt: . . . upon me this last summer, yet as soon as I could go safely abroad, I pursued the business, and do beg you to believe, that no endeavours of mine shall be wanting to perfect the settlement. You once put me in hopes of seeing you before this Christmas: your friends are sorry for the disappointment, pray lose no more time than is of absolute necessity. The bearer will tell you all things may be now easily settled, if the right way be taken. I long to hear how your young daughter does; she will find many friends, and I hope her portion will be well secured. God send you a happy new-year, and that I may be merry with you before it be far spent: am I beseech you keep me in the good opinion of your friend. I will always make good what I promised to you. It is directed for Mrs. Charlton. Juryman. My lord, I desire to know who that is directed to. Clerk of the Peace. It is directed to Mrs. Charlton. Serj. Tremain. Shew captain Billop those two papers. Which was done. What say you to them, captain Billop. My mark is on the outside, but there is nothing written in that; I believe it is taken off from the inner paper. L. Preston. Pray, my lord, is this any proof I beseech you for Gods sake to have regard for a mans life. Sol. Gen. Pray shew the paper to my...
